From the Desk of Rabbi David Wise The Great Revolt

One of the benefits of my involvement with AIPAC is access to thought leaders in the world of politics. Last August, at the annual pre-Holy Days rabbinic symposium, we heard a presentation by journalist Salena Zito and political advisor Brad Todd, authors of The Great Revolt: Inside the Populist Coalition Reshaping American Politics. I remember their presentation vividly, and the consensus around my table of colleagues was that it was the best panel we had ever witnessed at an AIPAC event. I made sure to order the book, and moved it up my queue of volumes awaiting my attention. It's the subject of this month's installment of The Rabbi's Nightstand.

Two years since the 2016 election, many Americans are still stunned by the results. Salena Zito, who was born and raised in Pittsburgh, did what few reporters bothered to do during that campaign or after the election. She visited five swing states, seeking out ten counties that had swung from being solid, two-time wins for Obama to widely in favor of Trump. "From farm counties in Iowa and Wisconsin, to the suburbs of Detroit, to fading industrial centers on the shores of Lake Erie and the Mississippi, we spent time in diners, watering holes, bed-and-breakfasts, and coffee shops, finding Trump voters where they live and work. We avoided interstates and chain restaurants, looking for the places that make these communities authentic so we could better trace the journey of the voters who shook the American political system" (p. 18)

Zito and Todd also based their finds on "The Great Revolt Survey" that was conducted exclusively for the book. They discovered threads that ran through the people they interviewed, and grouped voters in cleverly titled categories. "Perotistas" were voters who were drawn to the candidacy of a disruptive political outsider (reminiscent of Ross Perot) because they felt failed by traditional politics. "Girl Gun Power" describes a segment of educated, middle-class female voters who celebrated Trump's endorsement from the NRA, and who cite their commitment to gun ownership rights as an expression of feminism.

"Rotary Reliables" were holders of advanced degrees living in communities with lower average levels of college education. But that level of communal diversity is unlike, say, the Upper West Side of Manhattan. "These voters did not face the kind of social pressure to oppose the lewd and coarse Trump that their college-educated peers did in the suburbs" (p. 145). And "King Cyrus Christians" were looking for someone, anyone, on the Republican ticket who would side with them in their understanding of America's culture wars, especially when it came to Supreme Court nominations. As one faith-based advocacy group leader admitted, "My personal support for Donald Trump has never been based upon shared values, it is based upon shared concerns" (p. 173).

Co-author Todd, who does opinion research for Republican client candidates, seems to be the dominant voice in the concluding chapters that seek to make sense of the interviews and data. In chapters titled "A Culture Craving Respect," "Pragmatism Before Ideology," and "Localism, not Globalism," the book turns to evaluate the results of what the authors describe as a shift in priorities of the political Left. These changes have "at minimum powered the shotgun marriage of populism to conservatism, a connection unthinkable even twenty years ago" (p. 228).

As a resident of a large coastal city, I did not read The Great Revolt in search of validation, but rather to understand the parts of this country that least resemble mine. Zito and Todd conclude with observations that the 2016 election might be a sign of things to come in future elections. One wonders, as every day seems to bring the announcement of another new 2020 presidential candidate, if others are paying attention to those signs. I encourage you to read The Great Revolt and draw your own conclusions.

Until next month!

Masquerading Through Life

It is hard to find another festival in the Jewish calendar that can tell us more about life than the hilarious celebration of Purim.

The glorious spirit of Purim is reflected in its carnival-like nature. Other people have their annual carnivals in their calendar too. Many celebrations, like the Mardi Gras, last a full week or more. For the Jew, a week is a long period of time, time to be reserved for creativity and not wasted in frivolity and ephemeral pleasures. Purim is observed for only one day. The message of the holiday can be gotten across without prolonged "naarishkeit."

On Purim we reenact the events of the Biblical Scroll of Esther. The thrilling action recorded in those ten brief chapters of Megillat Esther is read formally as part of the evening service, and then again in the morning of Purim. Then, after the Megillah and the noisemakers set the spirit. Jews customarily adjourn to the social hall or to their homes and celebrate the victory of Mordecai and Esther over the unsuccessful plot of Haman and his henchmen. Regarding the use of intoxicants which was never prevalent among Jews according to the Talmud, one may drink on Purim until he can no longer distinguish "cursed be Haman" from "blessed be Mordecai." Imbibing was allowed so as to comply with the term "mishteh" – banquet - mentioned in the Megillah twenty times which equal to the total of all the other times it is found in the rest of the Bible, which is expressly permitted in the Bible for the yearly celebration of Purim.

The festivities usually included a reenactment of the suspenseful Biblical narrative in rhyme and song, dance, costume, pantomime, and masquerade.

We are told that masquerading on Purim was first introduced at the close of the fifteenth century by Italian Jewry that had been influenced by the Roman carnivals. It appears the custom of donning masks and costumes is here to stay. Almost everyone will agree that masquerading is purely for fun and merry-making. No one is permitted to be serious or introspective on Purim. We joke, we jest, we pretend, we gloat over Haman's downfall. We masquerade as weird, questionable, and grotesque individuals. Some masquerade as personifications of evil and banality. We masquerade as opposites of our true selves. All this is allowed on Purim.

Some of us think Purim is never over. Look how many clown away their days never accomplish much that is worthwhile. We masquerade our way all along the social structure of our lives. We pretend to be concerned with the plight of humanity, with poverty, with war. We pretend our concern for education in general and Jewish education in particular. We play games, we while away the hours. Yes, yes, joy is supposed to be a basic ingredient in the mixture of life. But life is most beneficially lived, when those who would accept its responsibilities would face up to them in joyous anticipation of their fulfillment.

Let's celebrate Purim, live it up, have schnapps, two or even three, pretend away the whole way. But on the morrow let's not forget to remove our masks.

My wife, Ruth and I wish everyone of you a Happy Purim! Chag Purim Sameach!

Ohr Chadash News

Ohr Chadash Celebrates Tu Bishvat

The children had a blast making special arts and crafts project in honor of the holidays of Tu Bishvat and MLK day. We discussed with the students the significance of each of these days and the importance of thinking about improving the world and creating our own legacy. As part of the arts and crafts project, the children cut out pictures and words which best represent their own legacies. We also had Rabbi Kogan come to speak with the students about the connection between trees and people. He even demonstrated to the children the visual of being a "human tree".

The following week the children continued in theme of Tu Bishvat, with a beautiful Tu Bishvat Seder. The children participated in an interactive Seder which included lots of singing, reading sections from the Torah and of course lots of delicious food! Many of the students participated by reading the various reading sections to their classmates. The Tu Bishvat Seder included four cups of grape juice, each juice with different colors to represent the change of the seasons. Additionally, the students ate from an array of scrumptious fruits. Each platter represented different kinds of fruits, namely some with a hard outside shell and some with a soft outer peel. Each of these fruits represented different personalities of people as we discussed the similarities between fruit trees and people.

Our winter has been relatively tame,
May the time of spring be just the same,
We hope your lives have been full of joy & fun,
And a wonderful part of coming months has formed & begun.

Today we want to send our condolences to Carol Reiss & her family on the loss of her beloved Mother, Ida Roseman. Mrs. Roseman was a member of Queens Village Jewish Center for many years, & a wonderful member in every phase of the Shul. When she walked into a room, everyone's eyes were looking at her with great love & adoration. Last month we sent her Happy Birthday wishes, but she passed away before she could reach the date. May she RIP, & again, our sincere condolences to the family.

There is only one birthday in the coming month, & it happens to be mine.

Please enjoy Purim with your families. Don't forget to let me know any news that we can forward to our congregants in this column. Thank you.

Dear Friends,

I am pleased to inform you about another Chesed event. On Sunday, March 31 from 10:00 AM-12:00 PM we will welcome Eileen Travis, LCSW. Director, Lawyer Assistance Program, New York City Bar Association. Menchel Hall. Refreshments will be served.

Topic: Mental Health For All (Not Just Attorneys) Ms. Travis will reveal how the legal profession is not immune from mental health issues and substance abuse concerns. The stigma of seeking help for a mental health issue is the obstacle. Please join us to learn how we can intervene for a family member or friend who may need help.

In addition, I want to remind you to mark your calendars for a Scholar in Residence; Rabbi Steven Glazer.

On Shabbat Friday, May 31 and Shabbat morning and afternoon June 1 we will hear teachings and the advice from Rabbi Glazer pertaining to his research and books on Care Giving, in addition to Alzheimer Disease. It should prove to be an informative series.

Remembering My Dear Friend and Our
Long Time Congregant
SAM SOLASZ z"l

On February 13th, my good friend, Sam Solasz passed away. He was a devoted husband to our dear Rose Solasz and loving father of Mark, Scott and Diane and grandfather to so many adoring grandchildren. I am so deeply saddened and will miss him terribly. Sam and Rose have been members of our shul for over 50 years.

Not having been able to be at his funeral (I had to go to Florida to be with my family for my grandson's ufruf which took place the weekend of February 15th, the same day as Sam's funeral), I want to now share with you my inner most feelings & thoughts about Sam and the exceptional human being that he was.

I honestly don't know where to begin. Sam was one of the strongest, most determined, colorful, & loyal individuals I have ever met and I am so honored to have been his friend, neighbor and Cantor. When Sam would walk into a room, he would catch everyone's attention and captivate all with his stories. He would always speak up and give you his true thoughts and opinions. He was incredibly strong willed and sometimes a little stubborn but always very caring, honest & loving! Sam was given a second chance at life and was determined to live his life to its fullest and follow his individual instincts & directions no matter what.

Sam's book, "Angel of the Ghetto" was recently released. He shared his incredible and extraordinary journey of courage and resourcefulness and his unwavering determination to survive. Sam's story is a true inspiration! While witnessing unimaginable inhumanity, Sam found the strength and bravery to escape, survive and live on. It was in the Bialystok Ghetto that Sam Solasz became known as "The Angel of the Ghetto." He would sneak in and out of the ghetto multiple times each day, risking his life to find food and anything else that would help others survive in the ghetto. When the ghetto was finally evacuated, everyone, including Sam and his entire family, was transported to a train going to Treblinka. At one point when the train slowed down, he yelled out in Polish from the cattle car to the people he could see outside on the ground watching the train go by, "what's happening?" and the people just put their fingers under their necks as if to say; "you are dead". He ultimately found a way to jump from the speeding cattle car and ran as fast as he could into the forest while being shot at.

This past summer, June and I went on a trip to Poland with several dear members of our congregation, organized by Sam. It was an extremely emotional experience and journey that he took us on. We went to Auschwitz, Treblinka, Bialystok, Warsaw and so many other places, where Jews were slaughtered by the hands of the Nazis. Sam took us to the Great Synagogue of Bialystok and told us how thousands of Jews were piled into the synagogue and burned to death. The only remaining part of the synagogue after this horrific fire was the HIGH CEILING DOME, which Sam made sure would be preserved by getting the Polish government not to build on that piece of land so it would remain a sacred remembrance. While we were there, the Polish government actually held a large ceremony honoring Sam for what he did to ensure the synagogue DOME remains a sacred place to pay tribute to those who perished. He also took us to the Jewish cemetery of Bialystok where the headstones had been vandalized, desecrated and trashed after the war. When Sam had seen this, he had a big wall built around the cemetery to prevent the vandals from coming in and further destroying the sacred headstones. He also took us to a site in the forest where the Nazis had thousands of Jews dig a mass grave and then shot them all to death. We went to many places and sites throughout Poland where our people were murdered, gassed, burned, shot & starved to death. He gave us his first-hand account of what he witnessed and the evil that took over Poland. After the war,

Sam served as President of the Bialystoker Home for Aged on the Lower East Side, for many years.

I feel so blessed that I (and the others on our trip) had this special opportunity to join Sam and his family on this remarkable journey, although filled with sadness & horror, it made us really understand what Sam, his family and the millions of Jews went through and how they suffered and perished. In fact, he even arranged for us to go to the town of LAMAZ where my father & mother grew up and lived until they fled Poland in 1939 right before the break-out of the war. It was a very special opportunity for me to see the town my father always reminisced about.

We shall NEVER FORGET the days we spent with SAM SOLASZ in Poland, the summer of 2018.

Sam survived! When he found his way to America, he had nothing but $10 in his pocket, the money he earned cutting meat aboard the army ship that brought him to New York as a displaced person. He and Rose met while ice-skating at Madison Square Garden and with Rose, Sam found a new start, and eventually settled in Hollis Hills. They created a beautiful life together filled with family, love, community and Jewish Tradition. Sam built an extremely successful business, Master Purveyors, and gave so much of his time and his financial resources to help others, including our congregation, during his lifetime.

We at Hollis Hills are so fortunate to have had Sam as one of our very active Board Members together with Rose who has also been very active in our Hollis Hills Hadassah.

Over the years, I spent many hours sitting and talking with Sam and hearing his incredible journey. I was glued to his every word. What Sam went through is unthinkable. He was a true survivor, he was a good & kind man, a loving husband, wonderful father and grandfather and, he was my friend and our dear member.

Sam, we will miss you and we love you! May your memory be a blessing for all who knew you!

May you rest in peace!

Macaroni for Purim

This Purim, when you come to the Megillah reading on March 20th, please consider bringing an unopened box of Macaroni and Cheese, or an unopened box of plain macaroni, to use as your grogger.

it makes a great noise - and if you leave it in a box at the back of the sanctuary when the Megillah reading is over, we can make a significant donation to the poor.

Thank you for always caring!

Life After Retirement

A PRE-PURIM MESSAGE

HAMAN IS ALIVE AND
WELL LIVING IN THE EU &
WORKING FULL-TIME IN
THE U.N.!

Dear HHBJC Members,

The European Union needs to implement its own declared policy of rejecting outright any boycotting of Israel or any other fellow member of the U.N.

As the Israeli Ministry of Strategic affairs has officially demanded: "the U.N. must cease funding organizations that promote boycotts against the state of Israel...more than five million dollars sterling was transferred to ten organizations boycotting Israel. Two were awarded a multi-year grant of 750,000 sterling from the EU beginning in 2018".

Sadly- and in my humble opinion, outrageously- EU Foreign Minister Federica Mogherini has "continued to transfer Millions of European Union funds to NGO's which promote boycotts of a fellow member of the United Nations."

It seems as if the entire continent of Europe has not yet cleansed itself of its 2000 year old malady of anti-Semitism and is now masking it as "merely anti-Zionism", that is to say, "merely anti-Israelism. How shall we Americans who have defended Europe with our blood and treasure respond? The modern state of Israel is the only democratic state in the middle east and is the country that has supported the United States most consistently in the United Nations General Assembly even more than England and Canada.

When we read the megillah in schul this year and wind our Purim graggers loudly to drown out Haman's name symbolically and stamp our feet as well, why not make a mental note to ourselves to contact our officials in Washington to address this ongoing violation of un policy & ethical behavior.

G-d bless America!*

Respectfully,

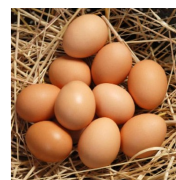

Rabbi Dr. Hirsch Joseph
Simckes
